EDWARD BARTLING SEED COMPANY

Business Established in 1871.

Nebraska City, Nebraska.

Since the early '70's Bartlings have been serving agricultural regions including Otoe county and its vicinity. Before the coming of the railroad to this side of the Missouri river, when shipments of grain were made on the old Muddy, the Bartling name had already been associated with transactions in grain and seed. At that pioneering stage in Nebraska City's development shipments of corn were actually made by waterway to St. Louis, an actuality then, which today, after a lapse of over half a century, appears once more as a commercial possibility, thanks to the tremendous efforts of the government to establish a channel down the ever-changing courses of that recalcitrant river.

It was before the flood of 1881 which inundated the Iowa bottoms when the river, instead of flowing past the foot of Nebraska City's main street, turned in its course about a mile upstream and provided an excellent docking site for the grain barges which had been towed behind steamers the long six hundred mile trip from St. Louis. Farmers for miles around contracted in advance of these arrivals to sell their corn and wheat and deliver it in three-bushel burlaps to the crude landing built to accommodate them. The late H. H. Bartling sent many barges loaded with Otoe county grain southward and thus established one of the earliest farm-to-market routes known to this region. It is still a function of importance with the present organization. This price card on seeds and grains, will enable you to dispose of your surplus stocks or replace those depleted stores to the best advantage. Over 65 years of service make us reliable agents.
